Introduction

What is an associate membership?

Associate member schemes are frequently used by modern trade associations to help develop a mutually complementary network of industry-specific partners.

Designed to accommodate organisations who don't meet the usual criteria of membership, it gives them the opportunity to ally themselves with an established and successful body and enjoy access to its members and the many benefits and services offered.

In return, it allows trade bodies to build stronger relationships with organisations that can offer relevant and useful services to their members.

SELECT Associate Membership

Associate Membership of SELECT gives you and your organisation the opportunity to play a key role in Scotland's largest construction trade body.

Founded in 1900 as The Electrical Contractors' Association of Scotland, we were the first trade association in the world to serve the electrical industry.

Today, we deliver a wide range of services to around 18,500 professionals and apprentices, train more than 3,500 electricians each year, and are committed to regulation of the electrical industry for a safer Scotland.

Becoming an Associate Member of SELECT means you can engage with our experts and Members, enjoy access to a wealth of services and benefits, and work with us to share the latest ideas and in-depth knowledge to help benefit the wider industry.

Benefits of Associate Membership
